In the field of information and communication, which is the main field of Test and Measurement Business, 5G smartphone penetration is slow despite that operators in each country has already initiated 5G service. This is because of some technical challenges in 5G via mmWave and delayed commercialization via C-band (*1) in the U.S.. In the U.S., where adoption of commercial 5G via mmWave is lagging, construction of base stations and other activities have begun in preparation for commercialization via C-band, which is in the Sub-6 GHz band. Therefore, demand for construction and maintenance measuring equipment is expected to emerge.

Meanwhile, the completion of the "Release 17 (*2)" standardization increase utilization of 5G. Research and development for 5G utilization in the automotive field has begun, as well as research and demonstration experiments for building 5G networks in private domains, such as private 5G. In IoT field, demand for Customer-Premises Equipment (CPE) which is laid in last mile is increasing. In response, demand for developing 5G wireless module and Wi-Fi 6E (*3) has emerged. Furthermore, research and development for the next generation communication standard, 6G, has begun.

In 5G networks, the O-RAN ALLIANCE has been working to open up wireless access networks so that operators can build wireless networks more flexibly. By applying the O-RAN standard specifications to base station equipment that was previously configured with the manufacturer's proprietary interface, it has become easier to build multi-vendor radio access networks. As a result, operators around the world are introducing O-RAN.

Since the data traffic is expanding rapidly due to sophisticated cloud computing services and the progress of 5G services, the network infrastructure is under strain. To solve this issue, service providers that are pursuing higher-speed networks are concentrating on the promotion of 100Gbps services, and network equipment manufacturers are developing 400Gbps network equipment.

Regarding COVID-19, the situation continues to be uncertain due to re-spreading infection by new variants. In addition, there are the following significant risk factors, increasing geopolitical risk caused by prolonged Russian invasion of Ukraine, soaring resource prices, prolonged global semiconductor shortage.

Anritsu takes measures against parts procurement risk like semiconductor shortage, such as securing inventory in an organized way, creating structure like strong relationship with business partners in order to get information quickly. Furthermore, we attempt to change high risk parts to alternative items for minimizing the risk.

(*1) The name for one of the frequency bands (4 to 8 GHz) when dividing the microwave bands

(*2) Standard number used in 3GPP

(*3) A wireless LAN Standard that specifies the extension of the bandwidth used by the 6th generation Wi-Fi 6 to the 6 GHz band

Amid such environment, during the cumulated second-quarter of the fiscal year ending March 31, 2023, orders increased 5.8 percent compared with the same period of the previous fiscal year to 57,944 million yen, and revenue increased 5.3 percent to 53,963 million yen. Operating profit decreased 27.7 percent to 5,412 million yen, profit before tax decreased 9.9 percent to 6,770 million yen. Profit decreased 7.1 percent to 5,105 million yen, and profit attributable to owners of parent decreased 6.7 percent to 5,100 million yen.

Operating results by segment are as follows.

1. Test and Measurement

	Six Months Ended September 30,		(Millions of yen)
	2021	2022	Change
Revenue	36,361	36,340	(21)	-0.1%
Operating profit (loss)	7,069	5,436	(1,632)	-23.1%

This segment group develops, manufactures, and sells measuring instruments and systems for a variety of communication applications, and service assurance. The group delivers them to service providers, network equipment manufacturers, and maintenance and installation companies.

During the cumulated second-quarter of the fiscal year ending March 31, 2023, we captured demand for 5G chipsets and mobile terminals development, as well as development and production-related demand for high-speed network transmission in data centers, etc. However, due to soaring raw material prices as well as increased sales promotion expenses and fixed costs caused by global inflation, rising labor costs, etc., revenue was at the same level as the previous year and operating income decreased.

Consequently, segment revenue decreased 0.1 percent compared with the same period of previous fiscal year to 36,340 million yen, operating profit decreased 23.1 percent to 5,436 million yen.

2. Products Quality Assurance

	Six Months Ended September 30,		(Millions of yen)
	2021	2022	Change
Revenue	10,954	11,926	971	8.9%
Operating profit (loss)	738	521	(216)	-29.4%

This segment group develops, manufactures, and sells production management systems and quality management systems, such as high-precision and high-speed auto checkweighers, automatic combination weighers and metal detectors, for the food, pharmaceutical and cosmetics industries.

During the cumulated second-quarter of the fiscal year ending March 31, 2023, capital investment for automation and manpower saving in quality assurance processes in the food market remained strong primarily in Americas. However, operating profit decreased due in part to higher sales promotion and parts procurement costs and distribution costs.

As a result, segment revenue increased 8.9 percent compared with the same period of previous fiscal year to 11,926 million yen, operating profit decreased 29.4 percent to 521 million yen.

3. Others

As a result, segment revenue increased 45.5 percent compared with the same period of the previous fiscal year to 5,697 million yen, and operating loss was 67 million yen. (Operating profit was 164 million yen in the same period of the previous fiscal year.)

(2) Outlook for the Fiscal Year Ending March 31, 2023

We have revised our business forecast announced on April 28, 2022, as shown on page 6.

There are concerns of a decline in the global economy as the result of rising prices, financial tightening policies, rising geopolitical risks, and other factors.

In our Group's main business segment, the T&M business, a price hike in raw materials and global inflation are having a greater impact on our business results than we initially expected. Therefore, based on the first half results, we have revised our operating income forecast for the T&M business downward by 1.5 billion yen. The assumed exchange rates have been revised to 140 yen to the US dollar and 135 yen to the euro in the second half of the fiscal year.

However, we are not making any changes to our initial plans for the PQA business or the other businesses.

Profit before tax, profit, and profit attributable to owners of parent have not been revised to reflect changes to operating profit and the impact of recorded finance income and costs.

As initially planned, we expect to issue annual dividends of 40.00 yen per share.
